Together, we can replace our broken healthcare system.

One card.
One plan.
All in.

Imagine you have a small plastic card in your wallet. Whenever you go to a hospital, clinic or dentist's office, whenever you need medicine, you present your card, and everything's covered — whether you're employed, unemployed, or retired. No forms, no bills.

This is not a crazy dream — it's what people in most industrialized countries already have — at half the cost of what Americans now pay for healthcare. They do it through a streamlined system of universal public health care.

Under our current system of healthcare, hundreds of private insurance companies compete for our business, creating confusion and aggravation. These companies waste 31 percent of our health dollars on paper-pushing, advertising, and profit-making.

By replacing private insurance companies with one single public insurer — the federal government (like Medicare), we'd save over $350 billion yearly — enough to cover all 47 million uninsured Americans. Everyone would be part of the same simple public plan. Insurance wouldn't come through employers. Instead, quality healthcare coverage would be a universal right. The system would be paid for by fair taxes on corporations and individuals. Most Americans would pay significantly less than they do now.

Please join with us in calling for a new national health plan that:

- ★ covers everyone
- ★ is simple
- ★ portable (not tied to employment)
- ★ publicly funded
- ★ allows free choice of any healthcare provider
- ★ provides training and income support for laid-off insurance workers.
